The Department of Environmental and Radiological Health Sciences (ERHS), invites applications to fill a vacancy for a 12-month, tenure-track, clinical faculty position at the Assistant or Associate Professor level in radiation oncology. Candidates must have a DVM or equivalent degree. A MS, PhD or other additional research training is desirable. Candidates should be ACVR (Radiation Oncology) board certified or board eligible. Experience with inverse treatment planning and stereotactic radiation therapy is desirable.

The successful candidate will join an internationally recognized Animal Cancer Center (ACC). The ACC sees more than 2,000 new cancer patients each year with over 250 patients receiving radiation therapy. The ACC includes over 80 faculty, residents, staff and graduate students in support of translational cancer research. The Radiation Oncology Program includes faculty positions in radiation oncology and medical physics, residents and support staff. The VTH also houses five faculty diagnostic radiologists. ERHS’s program in cancer research provides outstanding training opportunities for graduate students, as well as excellent collaborative research opportunities.

The program is located in the James L. Voss Veterinary Teaching Hospital (VTH) in Fort Collins, Colorado. Resources include a state-of-the-art Varian Trilogy Linear accelerator with on-board-imaging and stereotactic radiation capabilities, sliding leaf IMRT delivery, respiratory gating and a Varian Eclipse treatment planning system. Additional equipment at the VTH includes an integrated PACS/RIS/HIS system with digital radiology, nuclear medicine Gamma cameras, a 1.5 T GE MRI and a Phillips TF Big Bore PET/CT.

The successful candidate will have clinical, teaching and research responsibilities. Every faculty member is expected to participate in professional outreach, committee service, and curriculum development. Salary will be commensurate with the candidate’s qualifications and experience. The position is available immediately with a negotiable start date.

Colorado State University, with an enrollment of over 25,000 students, is located in Fort Collins at the base of the Rocky Mountains. Less than an hour from Rocky Mountain National Park, Fort Collins is a small city of 137,000 with an outstanding school system, and an extensive park and open space system with many bike and walking trails. Money Magazine ranked Fort Collins first in “Best Places to Live” in the western U.S. among small cities. Fort Collins has exceptional and abundant outdoor and cultural activities, and the cities of Boulder and Denver are within an hour’s drive.
